Hello Grantees,

Happy New Year! As we welcome a new year, we'd like to reflect on the amazing accomplishments of our grantees in 2021. You can read more about that in our 2021 Highlights for #RisingYouth blog post.

will feature some excellent, educational projects from #RisingYouth grantees. Don't forget to read until the end of the newsletter to see if you are this month's giveaway winner!

Sincerely,

The #RisingYouth Grantee Support Team

On behalf of the #RisingYouth Northern and Indigenous Advisory Panels, we invite you to the #RisingYouth Northern and Indigenous Perspectives Conference. At the conference, we will cover topics such as the importance of community engagement, mental health, youth empowerment, and how to utilize #RisingYouth grants.

We promote strong mental health, cultural identity, youth empowerment and community engagement across the country. With the pandemic, we have learned with the ongoing restrictions and guidelines, mental health and community engagement has been impacted especially among youth who self identify as Indigenous and those living in the north.

As a response, our #RisingYouth Northern and Indigenous Advisory Panels have teamed up to offer a virtual youth conference during the first weekend in February. The conference will be complete with speakers, presentations, and session door prizes. This conference will be open to all.

ALUMNI CHAMPION - ALAIN LAVOIE

Alain Lavoie is a 4th-year student in education at the Université de Moncton.

For his #RisingYouth project, he created a community library for his faculty. He found that the students have few resources and few books to educate themselves and improve the quality of teaching in schools. With the new library installed, he hopes that they can serve future teachers to consult the available resources there for their internship.

He is a passionate #RisingYouth Alumni and cherished partner who helps students to apply for #RisingYouth grants at the Université de Moncton as well as a video capsule host who interviews amazing Grantees and Alumni. As the Academic Vice President at the FÉÉCUM (Fédération des étudiantes et des étudiants du campus universitaire de Moncton), Alain is involved in numerous projects and committees. Not only does he help operate FÉÉCUM, he is also the president of the Conseil jeunesse de la CDR-Acadie, an organisation that promotes cooperative and social development as well as an ambassador for the MealExchange program, promoting food security on campuses across Canada. With his different engagements, Alain has been nominated and has received many leadership awards.

Follow Alain's path as an Alumni champion and youth leader! We have tons of Alumni opportunities for you once your Project Impact Report has been submitted!
